"We ain't having any more pienies, that is, church picnies, in our section now," sighed a Suffolk County farmer, as the cashier made out his bill for advertising his seed potatoes, and handed him his change. "We had on they are not talking of any more. "We had one, but "What seems to be the trouble?"

asked the cashier. "The fust one wasn't calkilated to make 'em popular," replied the old man, buckling up his pocketbook. don't think you could raise seven dol-lars toward another in the whole town-

"Didn't it come off in good shape?" inquired the cashier.

"It went off, and that was chiefly the trouble," was the response. "You see, the picnic was to raise some money to pay the interest on the mortgage and the balance to go to the heathen. The wimmen turned loose and made pic, and we men got some lemons and buckets, and if we stopped there it would have been all right. Lemonade and pie was good enough for anybody, but some smart Aleeks thought we ought to have soda water, and like a choice assortment of darned fools we all chipped in for one of those copper fountains.

"That's a pretty good idea," commented the cashier.

"Think so, ch!" replied the farmer dryly. "The idea was good enough, but the fountain made trouble. The way we fixed it was to let the nozzle of the contrivance stick up through the table and squirt during the frugal meal. Thought it would be a pleasant sight and enliven the proceedings."
"Did it?"

"It did. There's a great many factions in our county, but they agree that the fountain enlivened the proceedings. You know we all sat around the table on benches, and we men carved the pies while the wimmin dipped the lemonade. We was all to be helped before we turned the fountain loose, and then we was to catch the soda in glasses as it came out." "Did you catch any!"

"We did. We didn't catch much in the glasses, but we got the soda; that is, a good deal of it. Some of it got Why, sir; just as soon as the parson turned the spiggot you should have seen that pienic! Fizz! Whoop! And there we was!"

"Where were you?" "Well, we were scattered. The table has been heard of twice, and some letters from Connecticut think it looked as though it was falling. Pie! You should have seen them pies! One big apple pie, with a top and button attachment and scolloped edge, went through that picnic like a circular saw! You ought to see the timber fall around that part! A custard ditto went clean through old Aunt Betty Bigelow and smashed against a barn with a report like a sham battle. Pie! Friend, we carry sheet iron umbrellas in our section now!"

"Any one hurt?" asked the cashier. "Not to mention. We haven't got 'em all down out of the trees yet, but right with the exception of an edge or a joint knocked off here and there. I don't know that any one was killed, though half the pienic is yet to hear Telegraphing From Moving Trains. from. But the point I want to make is, that we ain't having any more of them

"That's where you're all wrong." suggested the cashier. "That very experience was just what you wante "How?" demanded the farmer. ence was just what you wanted."

"You was trying to raise a church debt, as I understand it. Now, why don't you open another soda fountain right under the debt?"

That settled it, and if a tornado is ever reported from down Suffolk county way, that cashier will have something to answer for. - Brooklyn Eagle.

The Hartford Courant says that the grand residence of the late Cornelius J. Vanderbilt, on Vanderbilt Hill, Hartford, was never occupied by its owner. It looks deserted, and the entrances of the two roadways are placarded "No admittance."

The Styles in Jewelry. "There is a run upon classic styles in jewelry," a fashionable jeweler said, "especially in ear-rings. What is the most popular? A large golden hoop, made of perfectly plain yellow gold. They are expensive, because they need to be deftly carved. An intricate design is most used. The antique patterns prevail, as the fashion demands a reproduction of the styles of the days of Cleopatra. But modern ladies are not at all content with chaste simplicity, and the loops must be heavily studded with jewels for those who mean to promenade the piazzas at Saratoga.
These loops have always been worn by gypsy women. We would not confess that in getting up the fashion and so we called them Egyptian, Pompeilan, As-syrian, Indian or Roman jewelry." "I observe you have the sunflower in jewelry."

"Yes, and we are indebted to Oscar Wilde for making it popular. The use of the topaz with fine frosted gold gives us a good sunflower, while an amethyst does duty for a pansy, and pearls and topazes can be worked up for the daisy. The very white shade that silver can now be made to take is useful in making flowers into jewelry. There is no new way of setting diamonds, except in flowers. The single stones of value are very simply mounted, silver being the best setting, and are worn close to the

"There is now an odd fancy about ear-rings. Two of a kind are no longer scrupulously held to be a pair, but odd stones are worn as a pair. You will see a pink pearl on one ear and a black one on the other, or you will see a diamond on one ear and a clear white pearl on the other. A Turkish grandee who was in this country some years ago com-mented upon the poverty of design in the ear-rings of American women. He said that the ear-rings, as a feature of personal decoration, did not seem to be appreciated; that the odalisques in the harems were the most beautiful earrings of any women in the world, and that, what was better, they designed them, there being no more exquisite taste in jewelry than that of the Sultana. I know of no fortunes in odd ear-rings in New York, and if the fashion of Cleopatra's days is adopted, it is not likely that her extravagance in jewelry will be imitated, for the pair of earrings she wore before Antony is said to have cost over half a million dollars." -New York Sun.

Resewood and Mahogany.

Resewood has been the leading wood to veneer plano-fortes for the past thirty or forty years. The best comes from Rio Janeiro, some of which is very rich, but varies considerably in different places where it is cut. Bahia rosewood is generally longer, heavier and harder to work, but some of it is handsomely crossfigured. As people generally demand dark colored rosewood, it has led to staining the light wood very often, which may be known when legs and arms, etc., of furniture and piano-fortes look unnaturally dark. At one time manufacturers used to cut rosewood veneers in ribbons to veneer picture frames, but soon resewood was imitated to such perfection by staining that the demand for rosewood vencers for picture frames ceased altogether. It is impossible to imitate mahogany by staining so as to deceive, or mend bad places in the wood, as is done in other kinds of wood. The wood is rich in color, close grained, heavy and durable, and unlike rosewood and many other woods, does not fade, but gains colors by time and grows darker.— The best mahogany known grows in The best manogany known grows in the Island of St. Domingo, and the finest of all on the south side of that is-

A piece of furniture veneered with mahogany looks as if it were full of life as you move before it, and shades every way, while a piece of furniture veneered with fully as handsome a veneer of Cuba mahogany will not shade every way as the other will, but shows best if you look at it from certain positions .-Cuba mahogany also is much more apt to have dark or black marks or stains in it, which, when they occur, greatly lessen its value.

A Violinist's Chords.

A citizen somewhat remotely connected with the city government not only plays the fiddle sweetly, but he has unbounded faith in the power of music over the human mind. He has fiddled dogs to sleep, fiddled cats into fits, and cured kicking horses of the vicious habit in three lessons, but never until yester-day did he have a chance to try the soft melodies on the ear of a drunken man. He found a chap sleeping off a ten-cent drink in an alley, and he skipped home for his fiddle, and returned and took a seat beside the sleeper. His first attempt was to strike the chord of Sympathy. After a few sorapes of the bow the sleeper's expression seemed to grow sad, and he sighed so heavily that the other end of his paper collar was torn off. Then he struck the chord of Merriment, and a solid, silver-plated grin crept over the sleeper's face and run down behind his ears. Then followed the chord of Contentment, and the old soaker settled down several inches into the straw and dirt, and didn't care if school never let out. Now came the chord of Despair. There was a wail from the fiddle, and the sleeper was working up a splendid expression of "kill me with a feather," when a woman who had no music in her soul leaned out of a third-story window and upset a pail of water over the victor and the victim, followed by the remark, "You want a few tears with that chord?"

The citizen remotely connected, and so forth, jumped by the rule the first dash, while the soaker sat up on end, 'em all down out of the trees yet, but looked all around, and shook off the those we have saved seems to be all wet with the observation. S'more rain. eh? Let 'er rip!

Telegraphing From Moving Trains. Capt. C. W. Williams, of the United States Army, has invented an apparatus for establishing telegraphic communication between railway trains moving on the same line of road from any point and at any time. It is claimed that once perfected the system will prove an effectual preventive of collisions, and among railroad men as well as the peolarge will be hailed as a great scientific triumph in the interest of human life and safety. The apparatus was tested a few days ago on the Elberton branch of the Atlanta & Charlotte

During the year 1881, according to the Registrar General's report, 139 persons for every 100,000 of the population of Scotland died of old age, and only 111 for every 100,000 of the population of England.

Mr. E. B. Elliott, Government Actuary, estimates that the population of the United States on June 1, 1890, will be 64,476,000: by 1900, 81,529,000, and on June L. 1910, 101,310,060.

Transplanting Teeth. I performed an operation of trans-planting under romantic circumstances on a certain occasion. A young lady, as protty as a peach, and a fine looking young fellow came to see me one morn After no little hesitation they told me they were betrothed, and that he was in the army and was going away to the plains for at least a year, hunting Indians. "And we are very unhappy at parting," whimpered she. "Yes, we are," almost blubbered he. "We heard of transplanting teeth, and want you to take one out of each of our mouths and transfer them." For a moment I was transfixed with laughter and astonishment. ment, and I attempted to reason them out of their foolish proposition—both had excellent teeth, by the way—but they insisted, so I extracted one of her largest back teeth and one of his smallest. Hers fitted his jaw all right, and he went off a few days afterward to his post with his lady love's molar. His tooth, however, would not stick in; for within a week the young lady came back with her face dreadfully swollen. I reduced the inflammation and eased the pain, but could not replant her lover's fang, and she went away with it wrapped up in paper. Oh! the inconsistency of woman! Six months after she married a man old enough to be her father. When the young Lieutenant subsequently returned he indignanti told me of the manner in which he ha been jilted, and requested me to immediately extract his false love's tooth, which I did, and he threw it into the Cleanliness in the Dairy. The sides and udder of every cow should, before milking, be thoroughly brushed and cleansed of everything that can fall into the milk pail. The farmer should place over the can which is to his milk, two cloth strainers, of unequal thickness, the thicker one be ing below the other. The lower one is best made of thick woolen flannel. woolen strainer will often take out a good deal of foreign matter that a linen or a cotton one would let through. As often as matter accumulates upon them. they should be turned over and rinsed till they are clean. This would be but a small item for each dairyman to do, and it would make a material difference in the quality of the butter or cheese that is to be made from it. This little attention to cleanliness would, like every other tidy act connected with the dairy, pay well in the long run, because it would make the goods so much more satisfactory and desirable. It would not remove entirely the necessity for straining at the factory, because flies and other objects which it is impossible to avoid are always liable to drop into milk while being handled, that must be got out, but it would keep out so much soluble matter that now goes in, as to make a material improvement in the products of the factories.—National Live-Stock Journal, Chicago.

Shoes of the Period. This is called a season of "pobby shoes." No man wears boots nowadays except when he goes a fishing. Patent-leather shoes with silk tops are the finest in the market, and cost from $12 to $18. A great many of the cloth-top shoes are in demand, and the custom shoemakers have abundance of work More than ever is there a demand for neatly fitting shoes, not only by the fullpursed buyers, but every person who gives any thought to personal appearance will have neat and trim shoes. and such shoes may be obtained for considerable less than the prices given, else some would go barefoot. It is said that unmarried men wear shoes a size too small on all important occasions, and a shoe one or two sizes too large later in life.

Shoemaking has become as delicate and difficult as watchmaking. In the large cities shoemakers are gathered from other countries-from Paris, London and Berlin. Better shoes are made in this country than anywhere else under the sun. In some places the shoe-makers are under control of a union. The union furnishes material and directs the styles. The custom-makers do not practice the uniformity system. Each man makes a complete pair of shoes. They work long days, sixteen hours or more, and make fair wages.

Trouble at the Post-Office.

A Milesian female approaches. She short and angular, with a hatchet shaped face and a hatched-edged voice. "Where's me letther?" is her abrupt question. "What letter?" asked the clerk. "Niver mind, now; I want me three cints." "What three cents?" "The three cints I gev ye to send a let-ther to Baltimoor." "What do you want the three cents for, then?" "Be-cause the letther niver wint." "And how do you know it never went?" "Be-cause when me sister answered it she said she niver got it." "How could she answer it if she never got it?" "Arrah, hould your head! Will yer give me the three cents, or won't ye?" "No, ma'am; you must be crazy to ask it." "Is it me crazy?" "Certainly; crazy as a bed-bug." "Bad luck to ye, an' is it a bed-bug." "Bad luck to ye, an' is it the likes of you that dare to call me a bed-bug? Is there any other way of get-tin' at 'ye except through this little windy by asked the now furious woman. "No, ma'am, no other way."
"Faith, it's lucky for you, thin. Av there was, I'd come and welt ye like an ould shoe. Niver mind," continued the lady, as she went away, "I'll tell me husband to-night, and he'll dot the two eyes of ye, so he will."
